Why Buy McClure's?

McClure's Magazine is bought and read in homes not because it is a magazine but because it is the magazine. Why?

FIRST—THE PRICE. It costs but one dollar a year, or less than ten cents a number, for over thirteen hundred two-column pages of reading matter. This amounts in actual bulk to twenty or twenty-five books costing anywhere from a dollar to two dollars a volume.

SECOND—QUALITY. The reading matter is written by America's leading writers—the best short story writers, the best writers on timely articles, the best writers of important serials, such as Schurz's Reminiscences or Baker's Railroad articles.

THIRD—TIMELINESS. The reading matter in McClures is not only good; it is not only entertaining, amusing, instructive and inspiring—it is also about the subjects in which you and all Americans are most interested at the time. No subjects in the next twelve months are going to be so important as the question of railroad rates and rebates and the question of life insurance. Both of these questions will be discussed by authorities in an impartial, careful, interesting way.

FOURTH—ITS CHARACTER. McClure's Magazine is not edited for children but at the same time, there is never a line in it that any young girl might not read its advertising pages are as clean as its editorial pages.

WASHINGTON LETTER

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 20th, 1906.

NEWS of the week centers in Cuba but it all has its echo in Washington where the course of things in the island is viewed with the deepest interest. First of all Secretary Taft has returned. He talked over his experiences in Cuba with the President and his conclusions rather indicate his belief that permanent peace has been assured in the island. The Secretary of War had a very difficult task in getting the 20,000 armed men disbanded, but this much has been accomplished and the chances are that new elections will be held with as little violence as would accompany them in most states of the Union. As to how long it will be necessary to retain the United States troops in Cuba, Secretary Taft would say very little. He learned during his stay in the island that it is very unsafe to prophecy about the course of Cuban events, therefore he was willing to let the matter rest with the statement that the American forces would be returned to this country "as soon as possible." It is certain, however, that at least 2,000 of the marines now on shore in Cuba will be brought home at once. Possibly 3,000 will remain as garrison in several of the coast towns. But it is to be remembered that every day of American occupation will cost the Cuban government a large amount of money. What proportion of the total expense will be assumed from Cuba by the United States none of the Government officials are yet willing to estimate. It is quite possible, however, that Cuba will be charged up with all the cost of sea transportation, with the cost of maintaining the troops while they are in Cuba, and possibly also their railroad fare from the interior of this country to the points of embarkation on the coast. If Cuba gets off with less than a bill for one million dollars disinterested observers think that she will be exceedingly lucky. If she is made to pay a bill of this size, it may do a good deal toward keeping her from having another revolution, as she will find that revolutions at this price are expensive luxuries.

Secretary Taft had something to say in his published interview as to the return of General Funston from Cuba, and he was very careful to explain that General Funston had accomplished all he was sent to Cuba to do, and that his return to this country was in no wise a reflection on his relations with any of the Cuban authorities. This, of course, is a diplomatic way of putting it, but the fact remains that the brief stay made by General Funston in the island was entirely due to the personal prejudice against him of some of the revolutionary generals. It is true that General Funston was of no Cuba. His knowledge of the language and his personal acquaintance with many of the long standing feuds between the leaders was exceedingly valuable. As a reward for his services, he has been given a good command on his return to the United States. Although only a brigadier, he is to be placed in command of a whole division. He will be assigned to the command of the Department of the Southwest with headquarters at St. Louis, instead of at Oklahoma City. The territorial limits of the command have not been changed but as a place of residence St. Louis is a good deal preferable to Oklahoma. At the same time General Greeley will be switched from St. Louis to Chicago and given command of the Department of the Lakes.

During the last few days the Government has been exceedingly anxious as to the fate of many American troops and valuable war-ships now on duty in and around Cuba. For forty-eight hours after the hurricane struck the Island this country was as entirely cut off from Cuba as though the Island had been wiped off the map. Considerable damage was done in the South and every wire South of Jacksonville was down. The Navy Department put as good a face as it could on the matter and said there was no danger apprehended. At the same time, with all the cables gone and many of the land wires wrecked, frantic efforts were made to get into communication with Havana by wireless. Charleston was the furthermost point South on the coast where there was a wireless station that could be reached by land lines. For two days and nights she pried unavailingly to get either St. Augustine or Pensacola but naturally in such a severe storm the wireless masts were one of the first things to go down. After long effort Charlestown got Pensacola and after a still longer wait a message was relayed to Key West, whence it was flashed to Havana just about the time that cable communication was re-established, and the grounding of the Brooklyn was known. Very meagre news has been received by the Department so far, as to the damage done to American property in Cuba, but it is known that there are over 100 dead, that more than 100 houses have been destroyed and considerable damage done to the American war-ships. How serious the damage to the Brooklyn will prove is not yet known, but it will be a curious fatality if, after bearing the brunt of the sea-fight off Santiago, she lays her iron bones under the Moro as the result of an ordinary hurricane.

The world doesn't owe you a living—it was here first.

A luxury becomes a necessity after you get used to it.

Expense is the only thing that keeps some people from being wicked.

The camel begins work at the age of 4 and is useful for half a century.

If some people did more hard work perhaps they would have less hard luck.

A charitable man gives according to his means and a miser according to his meanness.

Adam should have been a very happy man. He never had to pay a dressmaker's bill or build the fires.

The city of New York maintains on its pay rolls nearly 61,000 workers at an annual expense of $57,000,000.

In Oklahoma the richest citizens are the Indians who have been taken under the guardianship of Uncle Sam.

A correspondent says the aristocrats of Paris are becoming very fond of donkey meat. The beastly cannibals.

The Garden of Eden from the top of the apple tree wasn't a marker to the garden of millinery as seen from the pulpit.

There are many get-rich-quick schemes but it is not wise to invest in them unless you have too much money and want to lose some.

It is worthy of remark that the girl learning to waltz and the boy learning to play billiards do not get discouraged if they do not catch onto the game the first time.

You will notice that the lady sitting ahead of you has an awful time to keep her hair up if she has a pretty hand; and if there is a diamond on it, her hair just won't stay.

Not being up a tree, we may not be able to see clearly but it looks to us as though Cuba wanted to be one of the United States and was too proud to ask in the regular way for permission to come in.

Experiments have demonstrated the fact that a man can become beastly drunk by eating salt saturated with kerosene oil. This may necessitate the adding of a clause to the prohibition law in the arid states.

In Iowa hereafter the grocer will not only not pay anything for addled or rotten eggs, but the party caught selling them to him will lay himself liable to a fine of from $5 to $100 for violation of the pure food law.

Farm lands in America have increased in value six billion dollars since 1900; in other words, in the past five years the increase of value amounted to one-third. It would be a pretty flourishing town where property could claim an increase of one-third in value during the past five years.

Americans traveling in Mexico are said to be struck by the small number of cooking stoves there. The Mexican cooking apparatus is a clay brazier, constructed upon an elevated platform of the same material. The braziers are about four inches high and six to eight inches apart and wood is burned in them. The smoke and soot which gets all over the food may be relished by the natives but are not palatable to others.

The local paper should be found in every home. No children will grow up ignorant who are taught to appreciate the home paper. It may be called the stepping stone of intelligence in general information of all those matters not to be found in books. If you give your children only city papers which contain little or nothing about the persons they have seen, how can you expect them to be interested? Let them have the home paper and read of people whom they meet and of places with which they are familiar and soon an interest is awakened and increases with each arrival of the well edited paper of their home town. Thus a habit of reading is early formed and with it comes information that gives a desire for study and research. There is no greater educator than the good old home paper with its columns well filled with home news.

Recently we picked up a magazine and made an appalling discovery. According to the advertisements in this magazine, nobody can afford to be without fourteen different kinds of automobiles, no one can afford to be without eight different kinds of bicycle tires, nobody can afford to be without a $75 automobile lamp, nobody can afford to be without a $42 shotgun, nobody can afford to be without a $9 hunting suit, nobody can afford to be without a set of Tiffany silverware, price $320; nobody can afford to be without a suit of Never-Wearout underwear at $5, nobody can afford to be without a cut glass bowl at $15, nobody can afford to be without a $6 camera, etc. We figured it out that nobody could to without $23,642 worth of things. What are we to do? The sum of $23,642 is more than we can carry around in our vest pocket. It is real distressing.

USEFUL THINGS TO KNOW

If you have a pyrography outfit, it is best to have every broom and scrubbing brush marked with the name and object for which it is designed, so that there will be no danger of your persian rug being swept with a greasy kitchen broom.

A very satisfactory way of washing flannels is by means of an ordinary scrubbing or vegetable brush. Take the article to be washed and place it upon the washboard; rub over with soap and brush it until clean. This will be found a much easier way than the old one, and the clothes will last longer. It is equally as good for fine laces and silk gloves.

In making iron holders a sheet of asbestos should be spread between two pieces of denim to make an iron-holder that is light, easily held and impervious to heat.

Be sure to place a pad under the oil-cloth cover to your kitchen table, as it lessens the noise, renders it easier to clean and doubles its wearing qualities.

Flowers used on hats become faded after a short time. You make them look as fresh as new by dipping them, one at a time, into a solution made of gasoline and oil paints. Get the kind artists use, in the color desired. Then take a small quantity at a time and mix with the gasoline—not over a bowlful, for small flowers like roses. Try the mixture with a piece of cotton cloth. If it is the desired shade dip a rose, then when it becomes saturated shake it until nearly or quite dry. Repeat the process with each flower.

A good comfort lining when making a comfort for baby's cradle, use soft, fleecy padding, the kind that is used under the linen cloths of a dining table. It will prove most satisfactory.

Using gasoline without leaving a ring. This is done successfully by folding a small Turkish washrag once. Of this make a tight roll—winding together with a stout twine. Use the folded end of this as a swab. Place a small quantity of gasoline in a saucer, dip the swab in lightly, avoid too much fluid. Stroke the spot gently until it disappears. Never pour gasoline on a grease spot. The ring is caused by too free use of gasoline.

If a sticky or burned pan is rubbed with a dry bread crust, it will leave it beautifully smooth, and will not stick next time it is used. This is especially good for griddles.

For mending hard substances like metal or glass there is nothing more satisfactory than melted alum. Simply melt the alum over an intense heat, and apply while hot. An ivory handle to a knife which had loosened was mended in this way forty years ago, and has been in use ever since without breaking or loosening.

Beautiful and inexpensive hall curtains can be made of bobbinet with inch and a half hems all around. Down one side and across the bottom is a design four inches wide in the old-fashioned darning pattern. The work is very speedy and the cost was only for the bobbinet and mercerized floss for the darning.

Have the soles of new shoes varnished before they are worn. Select shoes that have not had the soles blackened before they leave the factory. The varnish makes a smooth, glossy surface that is impervious to water, and so toughens the leather that it wears much longer. Stout leather boots of the manish last, varnished can be worn with much comfort, the feet feeling warm and dry, even on a wet pavement.

To increase the capacity of clothes presses, cut sticks from old brooms and place them across the clothes press, letting the ends rest on the boards that hold the hooks. This enables many coat hangers to be used, and if in a gentleman's clothes press, trousers can be folded and placed over the rods so that the creases will remain in place.

DELAWARE COLLEGE BULLETIN

The last number of the Delaware College Bulletin (Vol. 3, No. 1) contains a list of graduates since the reorganization of the College in 1871. The committee in charge, of which Professor Short has been the most active member, has reached all but three of the graduates during these thirty-three years. Hence, in this publication, one finds the degree or degrees, occupation, and address of practically every alumnus for over a quarter of a century.

Aside from its intrinsic worth as a reference book, the bulletin is of great interest in showing the extremely satisfactory progress of the College. In 1888 there were but two graduates. One of them has since died, leaving T. Bayard Heisel, Esquire, of Wilmington, the sole surviving member. The next four classes show a small increase. In 1893, there were thirteen graduates; and from then till 1900 the number each year was about uniform. In 1901, the record shows a decided advance. The classes of the last five years have been quite large, 1905 reading with an enrollment of twenty-five. A comparison of the classes of 1895 and 1896 with those of 1905 and 1906 bears witness to the swing of the pendulum in regard to the occupations of the graduates. In 1895, seven men received the degree of A. B., and seven, degrees in Engineering; in 1896, there were but four engineers in a class of twelve. Of the twenty-five men in the class of 1905, sixteen were Engineers; and of the eighteen graduated in 1906, all but six have engaged in engineering work. There were two graduates of the Agricultural course in 1905 and one in 1906.

Do not neglect your teeth. A little attention now will save you much pain and expense later on. DR. J. ALLEN JOHNSON, Middletown, will make examination and estimate without charge. Gas given for painless extracting.

OUR WOMAN'S COLUMN

The Philadelphia girl who left her rich old bridegroom "waiting at the church," evidently didn't know the value of ready money.

Rub a little thin cold starch over windows or mirrows and wipe off with a soft cloth. This produces the most shiny results.

A Miss Smith is to represent Chicago in the New York beauty show. No matter what great affair is pulled off, there is sure to be a Smith in it.

There's no rush about catching a beau. Few things in the world are so numerous as men. The supply is large. Wait until the right one comes along.

In four-fifths of the United States birds with beautiful feathers have been early exterminated. A lady in New York has been seen wearing a cloak which cost the lives of 8,000 of those winged poems of side air which we call humming birds.

Uncle Sam has many of the fair sex in his employ at Washington. Twenty per cent. of the women are widows of Senators, or relatives of government officials. They are allowed one month for vacation and one month's sick leave, annually.

Women don't need medicines and sanitariums. They want rest and work, fresh air and sunlight, and cheerfulness. Staying in the house all the time would kill a camel or an ostrich, and how should a woman expect to endure such an unnatural existence?

Miss Mary M. McDonald of Brooklyn, N. Y., on Monday last, when the moment arrived for the ceremony of her marriage to W. F. Thaber stepped aside and put into her place Miss Viola Glover, a girl whom Thaber had wronged, and, with the assistance of her brothers, compelled him to marry the girl.

Women have patented cigarette machines but it would seem that the feminine fancy went too far when it undertook to evolve an improvement" in cigars by soaking them in an extract of pine needles "in order to take away that nasty taste." Yet such an "improvement," so called, may be found in the patent office.

A college of lovemaking has been established in Milwaukee. Most people had supposed that doing this came natural but possibly, after all, it is both an art and a science which may be acquired. Presumably the prizes for the greatest proficiency in the various classes will be marriage licenses with persons of title or great wealth as most desired.

Did you ever bake bananas? If not, you have missed a great dainty within the reach of all. Skin the bananas, lay them side by side on a baking dish or pan, put them into a hot oven and bake until a rich brown. The juice from the fruit will form a thick syrup. Serve hot or cold with cream and sugar, and you will thank us for suggesting this cheap but toothsome dish. Bananas so served will be found to be easily digested by those who cannot eat them raw without indigestion.

The startling statement was made by the Rev. Joseph A. Milburn before an audience of women at the Englewood Woman's club that: "Women—mothers and wives—are to blame for most of immorality in the world." Continuing, the speaker said: "Women allow one standard of morals for themselves and another for their husbands. When their boys go astray they hold out their hands to help them; when their daughters go astray they weep because they know they are forever ostracized and they make no effort to change this condition of affairs. Men should be held to the same restrictions as women, and womens hould be allowed the same latitude as men. The great sin is not the sin of the magnificent passion, but the sin of the circumscribed life. Women need broader scope. Their routine duties are narrowing. They get into ruts which are suicidal. Literature is a respite. Reading gives the necessary broadening influence. The tendency of most people is to become provincial and reading overcomes this tendency.

FOR SALE.—The "Vail Farm," containing 120 acres, at Hickory Grove, 2 miles from Delaware City. This is an exceptionally fine farm. Also the home farm of Thomas Reese, near Chesapeake City, containing 110 acres, with everything in complete order. These are two fine homes. GEORG W. INGREAM.

ROYAL Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Healthful cream of tartar, derived solely from grapes, refined to absolute purity, is the active principle of every pound of Royal Baking Powder.

Hence it is that Royal Baking Powder renders the food remarkable both for its fine flavor and healthfulness.

No alum, no phosphate—which are the principal elements of the so-called cheap baking powders and which are derived from bones, rock and sulphuric acid.

REPUBLICANS, STAND FIRM

"Every fair and thoughtful Republican voter, who believes that the consolidation of the Republican parties was for the best interests of the state should stand firm by the ticket nominated in this county at the primary election open to all Republicans.

"To attempt to divide the Republican vote and to again throw the county into the hands of the Democrats cannot commend itself to those Republicans who are such from principle and because they believe Republicans are better to be trusted than Democrats in control of the county affairs.

"What is designed by the make-believe second Republican ticket is evident. Purely a personal aggregation seeking to prevent the head of the old party division, the second ticket does not deserve any support from those who have long been anxious to see the Republicans get together.

"On two occasions we have seen this city elect a Democratic mayor because of party division. And now for the third time a very small minority of Republicans is seeking to do the same thing in respect to five county offices to be chosen on November 6th. We do not believe this personal ticket is to capture many votes, yet it might come to pass that enough misguided Republicans would support that ticket to make the election of the regular candidates of the combined Republicans a precarious matter. Thus it is for every Republican who may have a thought of voting for the ticket of the personal party to consider well what such a vote would mean. It would not be a Republican vote."—Morning News.

THEY ARE FOR REFORM

Recommended Five New Laws for Immediate Passage

DOVER, Oct. 24—The Afro-American State Convention held here yesterday and last evening was the greatest ever held in Delaware by Afro American. Not only were the convention halls crowded to overflowing with the intelligence and thrift of that race from all over Delaware, but a vast volume of business was transacted, at many times three committees being at work at once.

The convention recommended five new laws for immediate passage and handed them over to the executive committee of five of the most prominent colored men of Delaware, with President W. C. Jason of the State College, as chairman.

They provide for a State constabulary, better policing of cities; for local option throughout the State, for absolute prohibition of common law cohabitation or illegitimate unions; and for compulsory education.

The convention permanently organized into a league and adopted the name. The Good Citizenship Association of Delaware.

After instructing the executive committee to present the new laws to the Legislature, appearing before the Legislature in a body with the laws drawn into enacting form, the convention issued a strong address to the people of Delaware to co-operate with them in the uplifting of the negro race.

The new legislation was recommended in the following resolutions or platform, after several new laws, such as putting convicts to work upon the roads, offering heavy rewards for the detection of gambling, particulary with dice, and heaviest penalties for carrying deadly weapons were voted down:

"That a compulsory education law be enacted.

"We note that the living together as man and wife without being married is one of the most common sources of crime. We ask the State Legislature to make such living criminal and punishable by fines or imprisonment or both.

"That in our efforts to prevent demoralization and crime, we invoke the hearty co-operation of all the homes, the churches the courts, the schools, the press and all good people everywhere in our sincere and resolute endeavors for the protection of women of every race.

"That the question of license or no license in the traffic of liquors be submitted to the voters of the State.

"That we recommend an increase in the policing of the state, both in the cities and rural districts."

Address to the Public

We, the undersigned, in the exercise of authority vested in us by a Convention of Colored Citizens of the State of Delaware, held at Dover on the 23d of October, 1906, issue the following Statement, Explanation and Appeal to the general public:

We realize that there can be no government without law, and that the best government is that in which just laws are most universally respected and obeyed.

While we have no direct share in the making of the laws under which we live, we believe they were made by honest men for the good of all the people. We complain not at the law, its interpretation or administration in this State. We have been allowed to labor and to enjoy the fruits of honest toil. Our persons and property have been secure. No effort has been made to humiliate and degrade us as a race. We have a voice in the selection of those who exercise authority over us, and the negro accused of crime has a fair chance in the courts. The one instance in recent years when the mob has asserted itself to the subversion of order is the conspicuous exception to the general rule. Delaware has thus far declined to follow the example of certain other States in dealing with what they are pleased to call The Negro Problem, by unjust and oppressive legislation.

We prize these blessings of liberty, and purpose in our heart of hearts that by no act of ours will we forfeit the right to claim and enjoy them.

The Nation is being taught to believe that the Negro is a dangerous element, detrimental to the peace and prosperity of the Republic. He is held up to the gaze of the world as a vicious brute, destitute of morals and without intelligence save such as panders to the gratification of his lust. It is a falsehood born of prejudice and groundless hate. Prejudice is blind to truth, and hate defies.

There are criminal Negroes, however, as there are criminals of all other races. In Delaware, of late, they have been much in evidence, and have given color to the slander by furnishing instances of shocking depravity. They are classed with us because of the same color and similar social condition. They are forced upon us by circumstances, but we repudiate them. We would express in terms of unmitigated horror and disgust our detestation and condemnation of their crimes. There are brave and loyal men, pure and lovely women of our race who suffer unspeakable shame because of the conduct of those who have tarnished their good name and destroyed their peace.

During two and a half centuries of contact with the American people the Negro was making for himself a name for cheerfulness, patience and docility. To his industry the Nation owes a large share of its wealth. In patriotic devotion to his Country's cause, he has responded to every call to arms and freely shed his blood in every war. It is conceivable that in a single generation there could be such a transformation as some would have us think? That the whole race has become suddenly morose, insolent, vindictive, destructive? Not so! The lazy, the worthless, the unclean and criminal, are not fit to form the basis for a judgment upon all. The masses are true to their ancient and well established character. We represent the masses and in self-defense send forth this humble protest and appeal.

We appeal to the pulpit, the press, the noble manhood and the gentle womanhood of the State to aid us in changing the current of a public sentiment which seems disposed to forget the virtues of the many because of the vices of the comparatively few.

We are Americans; we have no other home on earth. We did not choose to come. We cannot choose but stay. Come weal or woe, we must fulfill our destiny by the side of our white neighbor in this land. It will be woe for us if those who have been hitherto our friends can be induced by those who have always been our foes to turn their faces from us.

We appeal to our own people to give no occasion for suspicion or distrust. Be temperate in speech, gentle in action. When wronged, seek legal and orderly means of redress. There is a patience more indicative of courage and strength than any show of resentment and anger. We entreat our young men to avoid those breeding places of crime and fountains of misery, the saloon and the gambling hell. Employ your hands with honest toil, your minds with useful knowledge. Be decent and honorable in private life, in public be gentlemen. Think not of yourselves alone; the safety and well-being of the whole race is largely in your keeping. Guard sacredly the trust we pray. Our salvation lies in the sympathy and cooperation of good men in whose breasts the sense of justice is not dead, and in the help of God who will not suffer us to be burdened above our strength.

People of Delaware hear us. The world is at the feet of the resourceful, aggressive, indomitable Anglo-Saxon. The brave and strong should be generous and kind. Give us the fair chance, the square deal. You should not offer less; we do not ask for more. We pledge ourselves to the service of the State as becometh good citizens, trusting that through loyalty to the supremacy of law on the part of both races we shall be spared the bitterness of strife and the horrors of bloodshed.

Wm. H. O. Ennis, Secretary,

GROCERIES!

Now the Fall weather is here, we have to give up some of our Summer desserts.

Of course Mr. Pumpkin is showing his face around town as much as to say, "I am good enough for custards." and so he is if you have plenty of eggs in the pantry.

How about a nice mince pie like mother used to make? Just try a little of our celebrated Atmore's mince meat, and then we will let you be the judge whether it is good or not.

In addition to our line of salt meats we have fresh sausage and scrapple every day.

We still continue our stock of fresh vegetables.

New dried fruits are now coming in such as raisins, currants, figs, prunes, etc. We also have a line of foreign and domestic fruits such as Tokay, Malaga and Concord grapes, bananas, oranges lemons, grape fruit, apples, etc.

Have you tried a can of our Beechnut baked beans put up in sanitarian cans? We also have their peanut butter, sweet orange marmalade and breakfast bacon.

Just a word to the boys and girls! Be sure to come see us before you start on your Hallow'een parade.

HOTEL MEN IN COURT

DOVER, Oct. 25.—In the Court of General Session, yesterday, George Loat, colored, indicted for the larceny of a gun and three boxes of shells from George W. Baker., Sr., a few weeks ago, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to six months imprisonment.

The grand jury returned with true bills against Frank Kramlich and William O. Price of Milford, for violating the law relative to having screens in front of their hotel bars thus obstructing the view from the outside.

The grand jury completed its work last evening, bringing in a batch of true bills, among them one against John Boyce, a white man, for manslaughter, he having assaulted Peter Geles at Bowers' Beach on August 9th, resulting in death a week later in a Philadelphia hospital; Juniper Bensons colored, murder in the first degree, he having killed Lutner G. H. Howell, at Frederica on June 9th.

Remonstrances have been filed with Clerk of the Peace McCommons against the license application of Joshua C. Armstrong, who desires to reopen the Harrington Hotel, against renewal of the licenses of Frank Newman of Harrington, and C. W. Bilderback of Bowers' Beach.

Fall Suit Remarks!

The Suits of the Season suggest stateliness rather than baggy fullness.

Take the coal for instance: though the shoulders are broad, the lines concave towards the waist, then flare out into long skirts, forming what is called the French Back.

Some of these suits have center vents with creased side seams.

The new big lapels tend to give the impression of a broad chest.

A noticeable feature of this long coat is the fact that it lends itself equally well to Short or Tall Men.

THERE'S A LONG PRICE RANGE
$8.50, $10, $12, Up To $15 or $25

The exclusive Tailor can charge you twice these prices, and he will if he has the opportunity, but you can rest assured that he never can give you better Suits.

MUST MEAN BUSINESS

The Smyrna Town Council is determined that the streets of that town shall not be torn up by a trolley company unless the latter means business. A franchise was asked for on Tuesday night for Main street, the whole length of the town. The Smyrna, Kent County and Delaware Bay Traction Company secured a franchise in 1905, but the Diamond State Transit Company is now about to absorb the company and proposes a line from Delaware City to Rehoboth. Stock in the new concern is being taken and those working the affair say it will be a go. But Smyrna Council in granting the franchise put in a proviso that the street should not be disturbed until at least ten miles were built to the north end of the town. When this is done the Council will give the company permission to lay the road toward Rehoboth.

DOVER, October 24th.—"We will sweep Kent County and have a Republican majority of 1000."—Allee.

Senator Allee, who had been charged with disaffection growing out of his failure to control the county convention nominations a fortnight ago, appeared before the Republican County Committee and declared with some vigor his absolute fealty to the cause of Republican success.

"Stand by the ticket," he said, "and work with a will to beat the Democrats. We want no Democrats in control of this county, much less our Legislature."

The Committee accepted the resignation of Edward W. Jenkins, the nominee for county treasurer, and substituted in place of Mr. Jenkins the name of Captain John T. Buckson, of Litte Creek. He was the Allee candidate for the Legislature.

Deacon Given had ... subject to spells of ... the spirits, "the b..., he called them, and William and his wife at first thought that he was suffering from his old complaint, but they soon realized that his mental barometer had reached a lower mark than ever before. In the morning he began family worship by reading from Lamentations, followed it up with a prayer that was a confession of sins, a wail of woe, a plea for mercy. This continued for a number of days. At last he announced one morning: I'm going away to be gone all day. Don't ask me where, for I'll prob'ly lie about it if you do.

As if you could tell a lie, father, laughed Amelia.

Are you able to go alone? asked William.

Oh, yes, yes; I couldn't go any other way, and I'm as able now as I ever will be.

Mrs. Dowe looked a little surprised to see the deacon again, but he immediately plunged into his subject.

Mis' Dowe, I've come to you for advice; nobody knows the distress of mind I've been in since I was here. Before I started to come over here that day, 'Mely asked me where I was going, and I ups and says, Oh, just over to the village. Beats all how easy that lie slipped out! 'Twas just as if I'd told 'em all my life. I never re'lized that I'd told it until I was 'most home. Now, what am I going to do about it? I can't bear to look 'Mely nor anybody else in the face. I've preached truthfulness and practised it, too, all my life, and to think lying should come so natural now. I thought my feet were set so firm in the ways of truth and uprightness that they could not turn aside. Perhaps I felt too secure, and this fall has come as a punishment.

Mrs. Dowie looked at him in astonishment. She noticed the marks of distress in his face; he had grown old and feeble since his former visit, and she pitied him.

Why, Deacon Given, that was such a trifle! What most folks would call a white lie, she said gently.

He ...ened up and looked ...ly. There ain't such ... a white lie. A lie is a ...sin is black, and foul, and ... Surely you think so? He ...d at her keenly.

Yes, yes, of course I do; but I do not believe that you have committed a sin that cannot be forgiven.

The Lord is gracious and merciful. I have prayed Him every day to forgive me, but I don't feel right yet.

Perhaps you will f..l better if you tell Amelia and your son.

She smiled encouragingly as she spoke.

I s'pose that must be what's right, because it's so hard to do. I've been fighting against it all the time. Only this morning 'Mely said she didn't believe that I could tell a lie; now to think I must tell her that I have lied, and it come easy.

His distress, shame and humiliation were so great that she longed to comfort him. He had appealed to her for help, and she wanted to help him. With the impulsiveness that had outlived her youth, she laid her hand on his and asked:

Will it help you any if I change my mind? I feel that perhaps I have been the cause of your trouble, and I would like to make it up to you.

Why, why! You don't mean it! The deacon's look of woe suddenly changed to joy as he took the plump hand in his. But I don't want you to think it was any fault of yours. I am the sinner, and I'll bear the blame.

Well, Deacon, to tell the truth, I've thought a good deal about how lonesome you must be, and if you think I can make your life any happier, I'm willing to try.

How glad I feel. Out of my bitterness has come forth sweet, out of my sorrow a great joy. He held her hand and shook it mechanically, looked at it, then gently placed it upon the arm of his chair. A smile, which the deacon did not see, flitted over Mrs. Dowe's face.

Do you think I ought to go before a church meeting and tell about that lie?

No, Deacon, it certainly ain't necessary to say anything about it to anybody except Amelia and William.

He drew a breath of relief.

...now, and we'll ... off and have all the children home for Thanksgiving.

As he rose to go Mrs. Dowe accompanied him to the door. Good-bye, he said, shaking hands with her. Good-bye, good-bye. He stood looking down at her a moment, turned and walked slowly toward his horse, went back again, and, shy and awkward as any young lover, kissed her cheek.

At home he said nothing about his visit until after supper; then he plunged into his subject.

William, 'Mely, I've got a confession to make. It's taken me a good while to get up courage for it, and maybe I couldn't now if a good woman hadn't helped me. You remember, 'Mely, 'bout the time, three weeks ago, when I dressed up in my best clothes and went away?

Amelia nodded, wondering.

You know you asked me where I was going, and I said I was just going over to Freedom. I lied. No use trying to gloss it over. 'Twas a lie. I——I went over to see the Widder Dowe at Hyler. I—I—you see, Elder Pingree said he thought she would make me a good companion. She wasn't willing at first, but I felt so bad I went to see her to-day, and she feels compassion on my loneliness and we're going to get settled in the old home by Thanksgiving.

Why, father! Haven't we made you comfortable? Haven't you been contented with us? Tears filled Amelia's eyes.

'Mely, don't ever think I ain't satisfied with what you've done for me. I couldn't desire to be treated better, but you don't understand. In the intensity of his feeling he rose to his feet and unconsciously adopted his prayer-meeting voice and manner.

William, 'Mely, that is home, and has been for over forty years. I love every acre of it. There hain't a speck of ground there that my foot hain't trod. I'm personally acquainted with every rock, and bush, and tree, and fence. And there's the garden with the laylock, and snowball, and rose bushes; your ma set 'em out when they were little sprouts, and there they've growed for years. I want to live nigh them again and take care of them. You can't understand what it is to have a home and love it for so many years and then leave it. Seems now as if I could understand how Adam felt when he was turned out of Eden, only Adam was rather better off than I am, for he had Eve; but I—the Lord took my Salome.

He looked with troubled appeal at William and Amelia. Her eyes filled with tears as she answered him out of the fullness of a loving, unselfish heart:

I understand, father; and if you will be happier there, it will be all right.

William was silent, though his compressed lips and averted head revealed his feelings.

The days following were busy ones for Amelia and the deacon, getting the old farm house ready for its new mistress. William took no part in the work, and his manner was so forbidding that his wife did not dare to mention the approaching marriage.

The morning of the deacon's wedding day came. William harnessed the horse for him and led it around to the door.

I hope, William, you will have a fittin' welcome for my wife.

The deacon's voice was stern and his manner dignified. William did not answer, but turned away. In the afternoon he drove out to the little burying ground where his mother lay. He expected to find her grave neglected; instead he found that it had been given the most careful attention. His thoughts, since his father had announced his intended marriage, had been almost constantly with his mother: his heart filled with angry resentment. He felt that his mother's memory was dishonored, that his father had forgotten her. But as he walked, the peculiar peace and stillness of the country graveyard enveloped him; he felt as if his mother were at his side, accompanying him. He was not thinking of any look or act of hers but rather the spirit of her life—and that spirit was gentleness.

At last he came back to her grave and looked at the inscription on the headstone:

"All her ways were ways of gentleness; all her paths were paths of peace."

Reverently he knelt, laying one hand on the marble slab:
